

Valle d'Aosta: an eco-friendly and inclusive destination

Valle d'Aosta is rich in natural heritage and rare beauty, with protected areas, breathtaking gardens, and majestic mountains. While welcoming tourists, the region is committed to preserving its biodiversity and landscapes. It is surrounded by Europe's highest and most iconic peaks: Mont Blanc, the Matterhorn, Gran Paradiso, and Monte Rosa. Despite being Italy's smallest region, Valle d'Aosta boasts an extraordinary wealth of stunning natural sites.

The Alpine landscapes of Italy are extraordinarily captivating, and even more so in Valle d'Aosta. This part of Italy is a jewel of remarkable natural beauty, offering a wide range of outdoor activities, cultural heritage, and excellent restaurants.

Valle d'Aosta is an appealing destination for visitors seeking wide open spaces, culture, and natural beauty. Discreet, generous, wild, and gourmet, Valle d'Aosta promises a diverse experience, combining the charm of historic villages with the thrill of high mountain peaks.

For years, the region has been dedicated to environmental conservation and sustainability. It places great importance on the quality of life of its residents and the well-being of its territory. In addition to protected natural sites, many residents are involved in sustainable tourism, ensuring that visitors can experience the very best while preserving the region's exceptional character. Nearly one third of Valle d'Aosta's territory is protected through national and regional parks, botanical gardens, and nature reserves.

For several years now, Valle d'Aosta Region has been pursuing a constant commitment to making its territory increasingly accessible and inclusive for people with different special needs.

Two projects best embody the concepts of an eco-friendly and inclusive destination:

Green Alpine Green Experience Project

Alpine Green Experience is a DMC that offers and helps organize a safe, sustainable holiday full of emotions, redefining the mountain stay with a strong focus on environmental sustainability. It provides electric car transportation, exclusive luxury hotel accommodation, opportunities for outdoor activities, zero-kilometre cuisine, and the chance to explore Alpine culture in all its facets, as well as to relax at thermal spas or in the many wellness centers of hospitality facilities. Accessibility and inclusivity

For several years, Valle d'Aosta Region has been committed to making its territory increasingly accessible and inclusive for people with different special needs. This commitment extends throughout the year: from winter, with "Skiing for All Abilities," to summer, thanks to collaboration with two other projects dedicated to improving the accessibility of walking routes, cultural itineraries, and tourist services. Together, these initiatives help strengthen an integrated approach that brings together sport, nature, and culture, promoting Aosta Valley tourism that is ever more attentive to everyone's needs.
